The mansion was built by the Webster family in 1857. Architect Henry Clutton. But it incorporates part of the medieval buildings of the Abbey, ie the west wall of the cloisters and parts of the frater and of the Abbot's lodgings. These are C13-C14. Stone. They are visible at the east side of the building. On the ground floor are nine pointed arches in early Perpendicular style with tracery now filled in. These were the west wall of the cloisters. At the south end is another medieval portion which is taller than the rest of the building. The remainder dates from 1857. Three storeys and modern attic. Thirteen windows and four dormers in all. Stone rubble, part of the upper storeys rendered. Castellated parapet. Modern tiled roof. Casement windows. Two stepped gables above the cloister arches. The west front dates largely from the C19.

The memorial at the Church of St Mary the Virgin, Battle, is one such example, which was raised as a permanent testament to the sacrifice made by those who lost their lives in the conflict. It was the gift of the Dean of Battle, the Very Reverend ER Currie, and the Honourable Mrs Currie, and was made by Mr GH Brett, and stands in the churchyard. It was unveiled in a ceremony on 15 February 1920 attended by the benefactors and a number of local dignitaries, in what local newspapers called a 'solemn and impressive service'. In common with other First World War memorials, it was added to following the Second World War

Name: No 4 Loose Farm, Hastings Road, Battle : C17 Farmhouse (Former)
No 4 Loose Farm Cottages, BattleGrade: IIDate Assigned: 14/08/2017Amended:*Revoked:*Legal Description

A semi-detached farm cottage, formerly a farmhouse with C17 origins. The cottage is of oak timber-framed construction; with replacement brick to the ground floor, apart from at the rear, where rubblestone is used, now (2017) painted. The first floor is clad in hung clay-tiles, again except at the rear where the catslide roof reaches down to the ground floor. The roof is also covered with clay-tiles, and the chimney stacks are of brick construction. Windows are multi-light timber or uPVC casements, and predominantly of C20 or C21 date. The cottage is three bays wide, running broadly north-east to south-west, the two bays to the north-east being within the original timber frame and the third bay to the south-west being a C21 kitchen extension which does not add to the special interest. The principal elevation faces north-west and the roof is hipped at the south-west end over the extension. The main chimney stack is shared with No 3 to the north-east, and there is an entrance lobby to the west of the stack. A second stack projects from the ridge to the south-west. There are two principal rooms at ground-floor level, retaining their original plan. At first-floor level the rooms within the timber frame have been divided into three bedrooms, and to the south-west there are further rooms in the C21 extension which are of no special interest. To the rear there is a single-storey outshot covered by the catslide roof. This houses a C20 stair, stairs to the cellar, and an access door sheltered by a late-C20 brick porch to the rear. The principal elevation of the cottage is of four bays, with the entrance door to the north-east end and the three bays to the south-west having multi-pane casement windows to both storeys. The door is plank, and is probably C19, with a later diamond-shaped opening. The side elevations of the original house are now obscured by No 3 to the north-east and by the C21 extension to the south-west. The rear elevation appears to be largely unchanged, apart from the projection of the C21 kitchen extension with its hipped roof, and the small square flat-roofed porch around the rear door. The roof here is a steep catslide and has two full-dormers. There are two original principal ground-floor rooms. The room to the north-east has a large spine beam with scroll stops, and the fireplace opening to the main stack has been filled and an early-C20 tiled surround added. There are plank-doors, one giving access to the rear and one to the south-western principal room. This room is finished with plaster including a bowed ceiling displaying the uneven character of historic materials and workmanship. This room also has a spine beam with scroll stops. The fireplace here has a late-C20 brick fire-surround. Within the single-storey outshot area, the rear wall of the timber frame is visible.

A stone stair descends from here to a brick-lined cellar where replacement timber floor joists are evident. A late C20 timber stair ascends against the rear wall, penetrating the timber frame at first-floor level. The substantial frame is exposed on the first-floor and in-filled with plaster. Throughout the first floor there are visible tension-braces, jowl posts and a double wall plate, suggesting that the eaves have been raised at some time. There has been subdivision of the two first-floor rooms. The room to the north-east is now two bedrooms, divided along the length of the spine beam. The most westerly room has an alcove that stands above the entrance lobby below, beside the narrowing body of the main stack. This room also has an indication within the frame of a possible earlier window opening, at the southern end of the north-western wall. The room to the south-west has been divided to provide a passage leading to the C21 extension. The attic space was not fully inspected. However, the space is subdivided front to back with a lath and plaster wall with an opening to the south-west, perhaps to create an area of living accommodation, and the walls appear to have been squared off beneath the purlins. There is also a partition between No 4 and No 3, either side of the main stack. The pegged roof structure comprises large coupled rafters with collars to the principals, and purlins to the south-west part of the roof; there is a later structure of supporting braces to the north-east part of the roof. POWDERMILL

House at gunpowder works, now hotel. C1794, converted to hotel c1980. Painted brick with brick external stacks and tiled hipped roof.

PLAN: Complex L-shaped plan with a central entrance stair hall linking double-depth ranges either side, the right-hand one extends back with single-storey ranges (former process buildings) within re-entrant.

INTERIOR: Altered, the hall contains a stair with stick balusters.

HISTORY: The Battle gunpowder mill operated from the late C17 until 1876, the middle of three on the river Asten. Powdermill House, situated below the mill dam, was rebuilt after an explosion in 1796. It contained the proprietor's residence and various process buildings, which probably included the single-storey ranges at the rear. The apparent concentration of processes in one large structure is unique in the gunpowder industry, the buildings of which were usually highly dispersed in single-process structures. It is not clear how the house is related to the water-powered activities of the works which would have been located below the mill pond.

Formerly house., now offices, shop & restaurant. Probably C15 5 bay structure of which 2 bays were an open hall, extended in the C16 to form a courtyard town house with internal alterations of 1661, restored and refenestrated in C20. Timber framed building. Ground floor refronted in sandstone on sandstone plinth. First floor tile hung. Hipped old tiled roof with central clustered brick stack and 2 other brick chimneystacks at ends. East elevation to High Street is of 2 storeys with 3 early C20 mullioned windows with leaded lights. Ground floor has 2 earlier window openings blocked in. C20 porch to north front. Internally the end jetty in the southern bay survives, but more features of the C16 survive. These include a ground floor eastern room with 2 late c16 doorcases with moulded bases, one with quatrefoil motifs and one with 3 leaves in circle western room with roll-moulded cross beams. On the first floor of the southern wall of the western chamber survives a 3-pane glazed window having mullions with cyma and ovolo mouldings. Roof of northern range is of side purlin queen post type. Ground floor eastern room has early C17 axial beam with lambs tongue stops with fleur de lys and open fireplace with wooden bressumer. Early C17 stone fireplace to first floor. c1661 well staircase with twisted balusters, panelling to ground floor eastern room with pilaster and first floor door with diamond panels (possibly a reused pulpit).

terrace, with rooms over. Stone rubble. Lancet windows. At the west end are two tall octagonal turrets which were built by Sir Anthony Browne in the C16 after the dissolution, when, as Guardian of the Princess Elizabeth he was preparing a lodging for her at the Abbey, though she never came. The Abbey was founded by William the Conqueror in 1087 on the site of the battle of Hastings. The high altar of the abbey church was erected on the spot where King Harold fell. Of the abbey church there are practically no remains above ground, but the foundations have been excavated and those at the east end are marked out. Scheduled Ancient Monument.
